CHARLTON ON TRIAL

YOUNG AMERICAN ACCUSED OF KILLING HIS WIFE IS BEFORE ITALIAN COURT

Porter Charlton went on trial at Como, Italy, today.

From the iron cage in which the prisoner in Italy is always confined in the courtroom the young American, not yet twenty-five, listened to the opening of the case. From the start it was clear that the defense would attempt to prove that he was insane when he killed with a mallet his wife of less than a month on the night of June 7, 1910, stuffed her body in a trunk, and threw it into the depths of Lake Como.

The strangeness of the crime was not lessened by the medieval cage, and the two fantastically costumed carbineers who guarded him, with their Napoleonic hats gaily cockaded and their decorated uniforms appeared in spite of the sinister setting like opera bouffe chorusmen.

Charlton is an American with Italian lawyers, in an Italian court being tried by Italian methods. However, in the two years since he was taken back to Italy he has learned the Italian language sufficiently well to be able to follow the progress of his trial.

The jury which will hear the pleas is an unusual one for Italy. It is made up almost entirely of professional men, and the reports of the alienists who have been watching the prisoner will not fall upon ignorant ears. There have been three reports by alienists—all of a type familiar in America, which will be introduced at the trial. The first, for the defense, declared him insane at the time the crime was committed; the second, for the crown, declared him sane, and the third, provided by the government, left loopholes both ways.

Coming between the court and the prisoner were the visions of the penalty which may be visited upon him. The sentence for deliberate murder is life imprisonment. The first ten years of life term are spent in solitary confinement in a dark cell with only bread and water for food—a sentence which practically means death from insanity in a few years. The sentence for murder not deliberate is twenty years.

The many extenuating circumstances in the case, together with the youth of the prisoner, and the fact that "crimes of passion" are not regarded with great seriousness in Italy, have led Charlton's counsel to believe that it will be quite possible to free him.

Charlton, then not twenty and a clerk in a New York banking house, married Mary Scott Castle, May 12, 1910. She was twice his age, had been well known in San Francisco and New York, and had short experience on the stage. She was of an intensely passionate and jealous nature, and when Charlton met her she was being held on bail for the shooting of William B. Craig, a broker, in the elevator of the Waldorf-Astoria. She fascinated Charlton and the attention of the young man pleased her.

They sailed for Genoa four days after their marriage, and immediately they began a series of violent quarrels. They went through Italy and to the shores of Como, where their quarrels were so strenuous that return to Italy to stand trial. There they were asked to leave the hotel. They they rented the villa Legnazzi at Moltrasio, where the crime was committed.

It is said that the experience drove Charlton into periods of insanity, during one of which he killed her. The details may cause part of the trial to be conducted behind locked doors. The final quarrel came late at night on June 7, and at its height Charlton, blind with rage, picked up a mallet and beat her to death. He put the body in a trunk and sank it in the lake. Then he fled. The trunk was found two days later and search was made for Charlton's body, for it was believed that he too was the victim of a murder. He was arrested as he walked from the gangplank of the Prinzess Irene in New York harbor. He had sailed from Genoa. He confessed the crime, but he and his father Judge Paul Charlton, fought extradition, and it was not until August, 1913, that the United States supreme court decided that he must return to Italy to stand trial. There he was lodged in an asylum for observance. Italian legal processes are slow, but the trial was finally set for August, 1914. The coming of the world war caused the first postponement, and Italy's entrance into the war caused it to be postponed again.

The time that he has spent in confinement will be taken into account if Charlton is sentenced to a limited term.

IN A CLEAN CITY

T. W. WATSON, CITY MANAGER, SAYS SAN DIEGO PROGRESSING ON GOOD LINES

While many of those who have gone from Glendale to visit San Diego this season have come back full of the wonders and beauties of the Exposition City, Manager Watson is different from them all in this that although he was down in San Diego for several days last week as a delegate to the Methodist conference he did not visit the Exposition grounds, but devoted himself to his duties as a delegate and endeavored to find out something about the municipal management of the city. Mr. Watson has visited San Diego at different times and is able to judge of the progress of the city during the past few years.

"San Diego," said Mr. Watson to a representative of the Glendale Evening News, "is one of the cleanest cities of its size I have ever been in. Recently the city authorities repaired many of the streets and most of them now present fine, smooth asphalt surfaces for the ordinary traffic of such a place. This year that traffic has been increased tenfold. Two years ago, I doubt if there were more than one or two jitneys running in the southern city. Now the streets are full of them. There is a constant succession of those vehicles running from the center of the city to the fair grounds and services all over. They are well patronized and seem to be flourishing.

"I had no time to visit the exposition, having been engaged in other duties, but I tried to see wherein Glendale might get the benefit of any civic innovations. I don't think there was much to pattern on but I did admire the systematic manner in which the street refuse was kept swept up and deposited in tight cans. In this way the refuse of the city was not blown about after having been swept up.

"San Diego is now a modern city with a large number of modern hotels and buildings. Those who saw San Diego some years ago would scarcely recognize it. It is a growing city. Growing slowly, it is true, but still growing. The streets are well lit and there appeared to be quite a deal of business going on.

"From what I saw the city is liberal in the way of providing autos for its officials. They believe in saving time there and the officials down to the dog catcher were provided with runabouts.

"San Diego exposition has been a success in its own way. I believe that it has brought a great number of people to that city and has done much to advertise the beauties of that lovely bay and fine climate. It is expected that the fame of San Diego will be spread far and wide and that there will be a further influx of visitors next year.

"It has been seriously proposed to keep the fair open during at least some part of next year and to bring down from San Francisco a number of exhibits and more successful of the Zone shows. In this way it is anticipated that there will be a large number who will visit the city next season. There is always a great deal of travel to San Diego during the winter season as the climate is mild and agreeable and the fair would prove, it is believed, an extra attraction.

"San Diego is waiting for the opening of the San Diego & Arizona railroad to arise and take its proper position among the cities of America. At present it is dependent on Los Angeles for its connection with the rest of the country except as far as the limited steamboat service is concerned. The railway is slowly progressing and when it is completed and the Colorado valley is connected with the seaboard San Diego will enter into its heritage.

AIR RAIDS ON LONDON

ENGLISH LADY WRITES MISS WHITTAKER OF GLENDALE STORY OF NIGHT ATTACK

Miss Whittaker of Willowdene, Ninth street, Glendale, received the following graphic and racy account of the Zeppelin raids on London from a lady friend who resides at present in the English capital. The story has necessarily been detached from the personal matters of the letter:

Tuesday night, after we had all got nicely settled in bed aunt heard some ominous booms and came in to wake us and beg us to get up and dress because she was sure the "Zeps" were around. We groped in the dark for our clothes and then all assembled in the drawing room which she decided was the safest in the house. There was a good deal of firing to be heard and occasionally a dull thud of a bomb and then silence and then another outburst and we sat up until about two all prepared to fly if necessary. Frazier, however, being very sleepy, preferred to go to bed and risk it, but we didn't want to miss anything. You can picture us in various conditions of half dressedness sitting in the little room, aunt very excited and asking us all the time, "Have you got your electric torches? Have you packed your emergency bags? Don't show any light now. I wonder if those beasts next door have got their top light blazing," and so on and so forth.

A boy friend who is staying here and I played "Beg of my neighbor" and drank cocoa and ate cake and went outdoors every now and then to exchange views with the policeman who said: "I was in Cambridge Square when the first bang come, Miss, and it fair shook the ground under my feet. We heard that all lights in the city were out and that "Zeps" were in so many parts of town that we knew it couldn't be true. There were more wild rumors floating around than you could keep track of and we did not know until the next day at midday just where the damage really was. It was about New Cross way among other places and most of London slept through it. I certainly should have if aunt had not roused me.

Seymour came up from Woolwich the next morning and gave thrilling accounts of his experiences. He was reading in his tent and suddenly the whole tent seemed to rise into the air and then subside with the loudest bang he ever heard in his life. He dowsed his glim and dressed in a tick and went to report. He admits that he was scared almost to death and the guns were firing like blazes and the noise indescribable. Then he had to go off with dispatches with no lights along pitch dark roads and altogether was a fairly washed-out looking lad by the time he got here in the morning.

The next night after dinner we went to try and get in the Hippodrome, but it was full so we dropped into a movie show nearby. The pictures were dull, but we stayed there until about 10:50 p. m. when there was a pause. The Russells said the show must be over, but I said they hadn't played "God Save the King" so it couldn't be.

In the meantime Frank heard a rumor of "Zeps" and slipped out to see, and when he came back he said, "Come along out, the Zeps are here, all the lights are out and the guns firing hard." We went quietly downstairs and found other people doing the same and then we heard bang after bang and I had the feeling that bombs were raining down all around us. We looked out and saw a wonderful searchlight sweeping the sky and people in the streets could see the "Zeps" quite well and cheered loudly every time the guns got anywhere near the brutes. It was the cheeriest, most controlled and calm crowd I ever saw. Some of the people were rather scared, but no one made any noise and most of them wanted to go out and watch. The young men went out to look and then came back and later one of them came in and said "Come on out and see them" and took his wife out, but we did not go, so I missed the chance of my life.

It seems the "Zeps" began to chuck bombs about 10:30 p. m. and by 11 p. m. they were driven off and disappeared. Then we walked to Piccadilly Circus, found a 32-bus there, got on the top and came home through the dark streets. It was really quite thrilling and we felt as if we were adding yet another adventure to our list.

If the Germans think they can scare London into fits by these "Zep"

ABOUT INSURANCE

ILLINOIS LEGISLATOR WOULD GIVE CONGRESS POWER TO REGULATE COMPANIES

A proposal for a constitutional amendment to give congress power to provide a uniform regulation of insurance companies in order that the burden on the companies may be lightened was made here today by Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman addressing the World's Insurance congress.

Senator Sherman, it is understood, will be in the race for the Republican nomination for president at the coming convention, and will probably be backed by the entire Illinois delegation.

"The regulations under which life insurance business is done ought to be national and not local," he said. "It has risen to the dignity, importance and power of a national undertaking. It totals, measured by money alone more than the transportation lines of the United States. No single line of human effort reaches so generally every walk and condition of life. The hundreds of millions of investments that safeguard life insurance contracts, the many hundreds of millions of policies carried, the vast responsibilities entailed are without a single regulation of government of the United States. It is proper now to institute a movement so as to amend the federal constitution as to give congress such power. Let it be done intelligently and in the name of justice. A united effort will succeed. Temporary defeat must not discourage but serve as the motive for future increased effort.

"We meet under conditions that have changed the world. Even neutral nations no longer feel secure. No treaty seems sacred. Barbaric force is still the substitute for justice in half the world. The destruction of life and material resources is unparalleled. The war debt will exceed the limits of imagination. The taxable wealth and productive energy of the future are pawned to the present and dedicated to sacking cities and indiscriminate butchery. Who remains to define modern civilization after a year of modern war. All human affairs end. The benediction of peace will some time hallow the battlefields of Europe. The era of the builder will then dawn, but on him will be the unceasing toll of taxgatherer. As the war has changed the world, so has it changed economic conditions and old methods of living. The extravagance and prodigality of the past are drawing to a close. The spendthrift and the heedless, the idler and the incompetent will have less chance than before. The world will be forced to a higher measure of economy and productiveness.

"In the reconstruction of the economic and the social justice fabric following the world-wide change in conditions, life insurance is destined to assume an increased and powerful influence.

"It is one of the greatest instruments to promote self support and protect the family known to civilized society. The legislator who sees in it only an enterprise to be burdened whenever taxes are to be laid has not analyzed well the relation between national strength and private individual support, the solvency of the family or its responsible head."

FRUIT GROWERS CONVENTION

Extensive plans are being made for the state fruit growers' convention which will be held at Visalia Nov. 18, 19 and 20. Col. Harris Weinstock, president of the state rural credits commission, will be one of the principal speakers. The women will have a session of their own under the supervision of Miss Lillian D. Clark of the University of California.

BURGLAR GOT HAUL

Further investigation of the burglary at the Selzer residence, San Fernando road, has revealed the fact that the burglar entered by way of a window from the side porch. The window had probably been left open. It has also been ascertained that the thief got quite a haul of jewelry, including two gold watches, one of which was set with diamonds; one sapphire ring, one opal ring, one clasp pin, one gold nugget pin, two long gold chains, one pair of silver earrings set with black diamonds and pearls; three bracelets, one set with diamonds; two brooches, one crescent pin, one diamond sunburst pin, two stick pins, one set with jade; and numerous other valuable objects of the jeweler's art.

CLERICAL LEADERSHIP IN CHURCHES

There was a time when a clergyman, "ex-officio" was the leader of a community. In those days education was not so widely spread, and to be the best educated man in a community, especially a small community was not so very difficult. In some of the older countries clergymen "ex-officio" were justices of the peace, and even to this day, that is the case. Clergymen retain judiciary powers to a certain extent in some foreign countries even now and are empowered to make and attest wills.

Those days, however, as far as the Protestant churches of America are concerned are past and modern clergymen must stand on their own feet and fight out the battle of life and solve the problem of clerical supervision without any adventitious privilege. Where a man is entirely dependent on a congregation for his subsistence he is more or less bound to walk cautiously in what he says as well as in what he does.

Of a modern clergyman tact is demanded to a very great extent. There may be many things on which a clergyman has personal opinions which it might be well that he should not thrust in the faces of those whom he is supposed to teach. It is well, even if a clergyman should have strong opinions on certain habits or customs, on which he and some of his congregation may differ to remember that even St. Augustine, by no means a latitudinarian in religion counseled liberty in things doubtful and charity in all things.

There has been of late years a tendency in some of the protestant churches of the United States to give clergymen short terms of service and some even go to the length of having a yearly election for the clergyman. This is opposed to the old custom of having the clergyman elected, as he is in certain churches to the present day "ad vitam aut culpam,"—for life or until he may commit some crime. It is certain that the old plan works well in many places. It is certain that a congregation grows attached to a wise and able clergyman and is usually loathe to exchange him for some other.

There is much to be said for the old plan of having a minister remain a lifetime in a community where he may grow to know and be known and be always an example for good to those who mark his meekness and lowliness of heart; his kindness and his charity. He may not fulfill the petition of the old prayer by being a "terror to evildoers" but he can certainly be a "praise and protection to those who do well."

Necessarily there is something to be said on both methods of handling the question of the clerical term of office. There are those who hold that it is good to have a clergyman feel that he is a mere servant, liable to dismissal at any moment or at least when his yearly term is up. On the other hand there are those who feel that no good work is ever done long under continual dread of the lash and that is what the closure power too often means.

While a church has its own rights and its own customs, it is composed of ordinary citizens. It enjoys certain privileges in a city and occupies a position of trust in a community. A church has certain social duties incumbent on it as far as the community in which it is situated is concerned. Not the least of these duties is to see that its clergyman enjoys a proper position and is so situated as to do most good and, if possible, to grow up with the community and to be a sort of guide and example to all with whom he is brought in contact. From this point of view, while everyone must recognize the right of churches, in this free land, to settle and exercise their own ecclesiastical polity, it might be well for everyone of them to consider the position their pastors ought to bear toward a community.

CHINA'S NEW RULER

There was much rejoicing in all democratic sections of the world when China arose and drove out her old, corrupt Manchu dynasty. The Manchus were aliens from the beginning and were only successful in establishing themselves on the throne of China because the ancient Ming dynasty had fallen into effete ways and had neither power nor inclination to resist. After some considerable sufferance of this rule China at last rebelled and the uprising under Dr. Sun Yat Sen speedily made an end of the old dynasty and established a republic in its place.

It was not however because the Chinese were all of a sudden turned republicans that they drove out the Manchus but because they were tired of corrupt rule and wanted something else. It is even questionable if in its present condition China is fit to establish a republic. In any case the first Chinese republic did not last long; but then neither did the first French republic.

In any case the Chinese chose Yuan Shi Kai the famous Chinese statesman as its president and in a short time he assumed all the power along with all the duties of the dynasty. It is merely a matter of a name.

It is said that Yuan Shi Kai is deliberating at this moment whether he shall go down to history as a Napoleon or a Washington. It is certain that he can be either if he so choose. The officials of the land are urging him to assume the imperial purple because they have no liking for plain democratic titles, neither do they fancy any popular interference with their methods of rule.

It is said by many Japanese authorities that Yuan Shi Kai is the ablest statesman in China at the present day. He has shown admirable tact and ability in handling the critical situation following upon the heels of the revolution of 1911. No other man could have accomplished so much as he has done for the good of his country.

It is true that under Yuan Shi Kai's rule republican government has disappeared long ago. Though president in name he is monarch in reality. He is even more powerful than the monarchs of other countries as he has no parliament to interfere with his desires, likes and dislikes. It does not appear, however, that he has as yet abused those powers and the people apparently are content with his rule.

What the Chinese want above all things is peace and they are getting it under Yuan Shi Kai. He is more capable of maintaining internal peace and securing freedom from foreign interference than any other man in the empire, therefore his rule is likely to endure for a time.

KEEP THE LOTS CLEAN

Now that the citizens of Glendale have an opportunity to see what an improvement it is to the appearance of the city to have the lots cleaned up and set in order it is almost certain that they will take a sufficient civic pride in keeping them in that condition. The city has done excellent work in cutting down and burning the weeds that disfigured the vacant ground throughout the city and it is not too much to expect of the citizens that they will maintain that condition.

As far as matters have gone there has been a most gratifying co-operation of the citizens with the city government. The activity displayed by a majority of those who own vacant lots was remarkable and a great deal of work was done in a very short time. In most cases the citizens who cut weeds set to work to burn them immediately and by careful burning of the straggling weeds left on the sidewalks a really trim and tidy look has been given to places that were little better than wildernesses a few weeks ago.

What is needed now is further co-operation on the part of the citizens to keep the newly cleared lots free from old cans and other rubbish and refuse. There is a tendency on the part of some people to make the newly cleaned area a dumping place for accumulated heaps of cans, in the hope, it is supposed, that the city will take them away. As far as has been made known the city has not resolved to cart away such accumulations and it would be well for those who are desirous of assisting the municipal authorities in maintaining the city in a state of tidiness, to avoid adding to the heaps of cans that are scattered over some lots.

Only by co-operation of all property occupiers can Glendale be made a city of beauty and cleanliness. Its reputation is already high in that respect and nothing should be done to mar it. Civic cleanliness is an asset. It is a powerful attraction to those who are looking for a place in which to settle. It undoubtedly adds a tangible percentage of value to real estate in such a center. It is practically certain that in this matter the city will receive the hearty and effective support of the citizenship.

LEARN ABOUT AMERICA

The average person is so apt to allow his mind to wander away from his own native land when it comes to the consideration of the beautiful and grand. There is no need of doing this for our own dear America contains all the picturesque scenery that the beauty lover could wish to behold. How prone the so-called educated are to talk about things in foreign lands just as the high school freshman is likely to talk about his tasks in Algebra and Latin instead of those in Arithmetic and grammar. Why not have something to say about the scenery to be found along the banks of the Mississippi, the Hudson and the Great Lakes? There are many beautiful sights in our own land.

IOWA PEOPLE IN GLENDALE

Those of us who have called the roll of states find that there are in Glendale many people who formerly resided in Iowa. Whenever you learn that a man hails from Iowa you are sure of finding an industrious, honest citizen. Iowa is a great state and she produces men of strong character.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

It is surprising how quickly the news of the world is flashed over the net work of wires that connect all of the principal cities of the land. You are invited to read carefully the daily reports on page 1 of this paper.

It is claimed that no city in the world has increased in recent years at the same pace at Tokio. In a generation it has more than doubled itself. The censu of 1878 showed the population as 813,000; that of 1912 as 2,000,000. It now ranks next to Chicago in matter of size, and is the fifth largest city in the world. The enormous growth of the last few years explains something of the peculiar anxiety of the Mikado's government for an outlet for the surplus population.—C. S. Monitor.

This is an age when people must think fast if they will keep up with the business procession of the world. The man who thinks today and acts tomorrow is left in the rear of the procession. Prompt action in thought like modern machinery is essential now.

WEATHER FORECAST—Fair tonight and Wednesday; easterly winds.

BAD ROADS ARE NOT OBSTACLE

J. W. Munroe, Pasadena Dodge dealer, says that the fame of the Dodge car as a hill climber is spreading far and wide, and stories of its wonderful work in the mountains are coming in thick and fast. The following account of how the Dodge touring car conquered what is called the Tug-of-War hill and Crawford Notch, which is the hardest climb in New England, is the latest.

To prove its power and reliability a Dodge car made the trip from Boston to Bretton woods and return in the high gear last week.

The Dodge left Boston in a dense fog and went by way of Crawford Notch. The gears, with the exception of high and reverse, were chiseled off so there was no alternative but to climb or turn back, for there is a tough grade there called Tug-of-War hill that has made many drivers call for a tow in the past. But the Dodge went up all right and continued on down the Merrimac valley, doing 360.2 miles in 12 hours, 48 minutes, or at an average speed of 28.1 miles per hour, though no attempt was made to speed the car for a record. The gasoline average was 16.74 miles per gallon.

PLEASANT EPISODE

Four years ago this present month W. A. Webber and the writer of this were comrades in travel, Chicago to Los Angeles, a preliminary feature before leaving being a farewell reception given by members of Centenary church in which all had labored in varied fields of uplift effort for 30 years. Mr. Webber went back for a month's visit to the Windy City and had an enjoyable time with relatives and friends. Invited to dine with one family he was "surprised" in a brief time by about 40 of his old church associates who had been called in to again meet and greet their former friend. Mr. Webber returned to the coast last week and came up Sunday for services at the First Methodist church and after to meet Mr. Parker and unload his pockets of names and messages from parties of the surprise party, every one of them being a devoted friend of "Uncle Sam." Oh, it is "sweet to be remembered"—and unless delivered in person their greetings could not come to me in more pleasing method than in this informal way. Over the wireless that reaches from heart to heart, defying distance, mountain, stream and plain, I greet thee. See Epworth league benediction.

HOOKWORM REMEDY

During recent years large amounts of thymol have been used in the treatment of hookworms. Scientists have been greatly interested in determining the manner in which this drug is excreted from the human body. In Hygienic Laboratory Bulletin No. 101 of the U. S. Public Health Service the results of an investigation of this important and interesting problem are outlined, and while considerable has been added to the scientific knowledge of the subject, the conclusion is reached that as yet no satisfactory explanation for the apparent disappearance of administered phenols has been found.

Preparations are to be made for the Christmas bazaar and the ladies are requested to bring fancy work intended for the fair, as work on that day in order that no time may be lost. As the winter work is about to begin, it will be a good time for new members to start in the guild work, and we cordially invite any woman interested in the church to join now.

HIGH SCHOOL P. T A.

What was undoubtedly the best attended meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of the Glendale Union High school ever known in the history of that body was held Monday afternoon in the music room of the High School. Seventy-four were present. Mrs. F. E. Hagin presided. Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson gave a most helpful and instructive address on the meaning of the association and its aims and purposes as well as its relation to the federation and to the state federation. A movement was started for a book exchange, which will save hundreds of dollars. Another movement was also started for an employment agency in connection with the school, by means of which young people anxious to study at the High School can earn their board and room by light work morning and evening. Mrs. John Barrows played a piano solo with her usual good taste and expression.

HOLDUP AT BURBANK

Darkness and fog combined with a deserted road to favor the operations of a couple of holdup men who attempted to rob Mr. H. H. Spaulding of Vine street, Burbank, Monday night, on an avenue that leads from the San Fernando road and the Pacific Electric track. Mr. Spaulding was returning home about 7 o'clock. He is about the only party to get off at the point where he left the car last night and usually there is no one on the avenue.

As he proceeded up the short avenue two men suddenly appeared in front of him and commanded him to hold up his hands. At first he thought it was a practical joke, but afterward he became convinced that the men were in earnest, for as he hesitated one of them fired a revolver at him. The flash and the noise so confused and frightened Mr. Spaulding that he fell to the ground and shouted. The next thing he saw was the holdup men running away as though they had seen some one coming. He then picked himself up and ran up the track.

News of the holdup was immediately telephoned to the police headquarters of Glendale and Chief Herald and Officers Hollenbeck, Lampert and Arrington watched the P. E. cars, but found no sign of any suspicious characters coming from the Burbank direction.

SHAKESPEARE CLUB

The Glendale Shakespeare club will study the second act of Macbeth Wednesday morning beginning promptly at 10 o'clock.

This opportunity for the advancement along Shakesperean lines is rare, owing to the fact that the president, Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan, gives all students who prefer to read the privelege to do so. Mrs. Sloan then in her masterful way offers criticisms.

These classes are free to all and at present are held at the studio of the president, Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan, 1550 Myrtle street.

CHAPTER L—P. E. O.

The regular meeting of Chapter L of P. E. O. will be held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Pearl C. Power, 133 S. Jackson street, at 2:30 o'clock instead of at the home of Mrs. Temple. Members are requested to note the change.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

A large audience was present at the Sunday morning service. Thirteen persons, all adults, were given the right hand of fellowship by the pastor. Those who were received were Mrs. J. E. Storm, Misses Neva and Ruth Storm, Mr. and Mrs. C. Cunningham, Miss Maude Cunningham, Mrs. Eva Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Tyler, Mrs. Nettie Cornell, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Lord. The communion of the Lord's Supper was administered by the pastor assisted by Rev. J. E. Storm. The service throughout was deeply spiritual and impressive.

During the four years since the congregation was begun in Glendale 200 persons have united with the church and 430 have been enrolled in the Sunday school. The net church membership today is 160 and the Sunday school has a net enrollment of 218. Dr. Willisford begins his fifth year under most auspicious encouragement

The church was well filled in the evening to hear and see an interesting and instructive illustrated address on "David, his times and country."

Next Sunday morning the Sunday school and church will combine and hold a rally day service commencing at 10:30 o'clock. A program of much interest will be presented at that time.

C. E. NIGHT

Special pre-communion services are being held at the Presbyterian church every night this week. Wednesday night is special Christian Endeavor night. Let every endeavorer and all young people of the church rally to the support of this meeting.

SHAKESPEARE SECTION

What is likely to prove a wonderful year spent with Shakespeare and his very able exponent, Mrs. Masie Fullman Garrett, was begun Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. E. Evans, 113 Orange street, by the Shakespeare section of the Tuesday Afternoon club. The commodious living room of the gracious hostess was filled to overflowing and the stairs had to be pressed into service. Mrs. Garrett greeted her new class pleasantly and informally; outlined her plan for teaching Shakespeare, and immediately secured the attention of the class by lifting their minds from modern surroundings and taking them back to the days of Shakespeare and then into the dim past of Egypt, with the setting of the Nile, where Antony and Cleopatra loved and suffered.

It is not too much to say that the Shakespeare section of the Tuesday Afternoon club counts itself fortunate in having secured so able an instructor as Mrs. Garrett. The ladies of the section are looking forward with interest to their next meeting on the third Monday of October.

After the program the hostess, Mrs. Evans, assisted by Mrs. Harry Goodwin, Mrs. Albert Pearce and Mrs. Walter Stamps, served hot buttered scones, tea and strawberries to the guests.

Following is the list of members: Mrs. Wayland Brown, Mrs. Frank Grosvenor, Mrs. Harry Goodwin, Mrs. Albert Pearce, Mrs. W. T. Thompson, Mrs. Frank Hester, Mrs. John Hunchberger, Mrs. Harry Lynch, Mrs. Charles Temple, Mrs. Glenwood Jones, Mrs. E. D. Yard, Mrs. Nash, Mrs. Laurence Ellis, Mrs. Nanville Williams, Mrs. Harry Lockwood, Mrs. Ernest Kimmel, Mrs. J. E. Lyon, Miss Nellie Williams and the hostess, Mrs. W. E. Evans.

GLENDALE CHORAL CLUB

At the opening meeting of the season the Glendale Choral club had a very gratifying representation of members present. The business of the evening was election of officers. Mr. Ringquest, president for last season, was re-elected to the same office. The other officers are: First vice president, Mrs. Helen I. Campbell; second vice president, Mrs. G. D. Roach; secretary, Mr. Jones; treasurer, Mrs. Charles Stanley. The society approved the report of the committee on rules and bylaws. The rehearsal of the new music was then begun.

SEWING CIRCLE TO MEET

Glendale Philanthropic Sewing Circle meets Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 6, at the home of Mrs. W. D. McRae, 1436 Salem street. There will be the usual business of the regular meetings and the rest of the time will be spent in work.

TO DISCUSS AMENDMENTS

Under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Federation Mrs. Charles H. Toll, chairman of the committee on education, presiding, a meeting will be held at the Union High school for the purpose of discussing the constitutional amendments. Several prominent political speakers will be present. The meeting will be free and open to the public. New taxation, rural credit and the non-partisan bill will be discussed.

Mr. Dudley Bullock of Buffalo, N. Y., was the week end guest of Miss Frances Payne of Central avenue.

raids they are jolly well mistaken. One fat man was near us in the entrance of the theater and he seemed annoyed because they had stopped him in the middle of a rubber of bridge. One old mother, who we sure thought would go into hysterics or die of fright, hurried off to fetch her glasses and told me while she could not see them very distinctly she could discern them. Lizzie's sister said her lodger came down very sleepily rubbing his eyes and said "Oh, Gott straff these yere Zeps." One old woman told us she was awakened by a fearful bang and so she turned round and went to sleep as hard as she could and never heard another thing.

I went down into the city the next day and found the whole world had turned out with children and perambulators to see the sights. The streets were packed, taxis and buses could only go at foot pace. At various corners there were recruiting meetings and hardly a policeman was in sight. There was a certain amount of damage done at Liverpool street station, probably from the anti-aircraft guns, which were firing at the "Zeps" for a solid half hour. A good many windows in the city were broken with the vibrations and a few people were killed.

The government won't allow any details to appear in the papers so of course all kinds of rumors get around and the Germans are the only people who have absolute information on the subject. We have sat up every night since until after twelve, because we want to be ready for them when they come again. I must confess to a distinct feeling of disappointment when nothing happened either Thursday or Friday. Last night I slept in the garden.

TROPICO

Deeply impressive were the funeral services of Mr. Albert Chadwick that were held in G. A. R. hall Saturday afternoon and were conducted by N. P. Banks Post No. 170, of which Mr. Chadwick was a member. Post Commander George W. Sanford, was assisted by Rev. C. R. Norton, chaplain of the post, and also chaplain of the Southern California Veterans' association. Chaplain Norton's beautiful and comforting remarks will ever linger as a sweet benediction not only to the bereaved ones, whom Comrade Chadwick left to mourn, but to the large concourse of sorrowing friends who assembled at G. A. R. hall to pay a last tribute to the memory of Comrade Chadwick who was a true and loyal member of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mrs. Eustace Benton Moore and Mrs. Hattie Boring sang very sweetly "Abide With Me" and "Rock of Ages," with Mrs. Joseph V. Griffin accompanist. Following the services at the G. A. R. hall the funeral cortege wended its way to beautiful Forest Lawn cemetery, where the Masons laid carefully and tenderly away all that was mortal of their Brother Chadwick who for forty years had been a Master Mason. Francis Booth sang "Nearer my God to Thee" and "Lead Kindly Light" during the Masonic services. Chaplain Norton, in the absence of Rev. Mills, prelate of Unity lodge, assisted with the prayers. The pallbearers were W. H. May, Everett May, W. D. Singleton, G. B. Singleton, J. F. Leddie and W. W. Stevenson, all of whom were Masonic brothers with whom Mr. Chadwick had sat in lodge for many years.

Beneath a mound of beautiful fragrant blossoms and many floral emblems all that was mortal of Albert Chadwick was laid away. "They never leave us, our friends who have passed through the shadow of death to the sunlight above, a thousand bright memories holding them fast, to the places they blest with their presence and love."

The funeral services of Albert Chadwick were attended by a number of out of town relatives and friends, among whom were Mr. D. E. Strahl of National City; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Singleton, Mrs. Amos Linton, Mr. Cecil Singleton of Azusa, Mr. W. H. May of Pomona, Mr. and Mrs. Everett May of Walnut, Kan.; Mr. and Mrs. Theo Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jacobs, Mr. J. F. Leddie, of Pasadena; Mrs. Emma Phelan of Lynwood; Mrs. Belle Connell of Willowbrook; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stevenson of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Beck of Eagle Rock, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Oleson, Miss Marian Oleson, Mrs. Edith McLellan of San Pedro; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Singleton, Miss Mildred Singleton, Mrs. Clifford of Glendale.

Tropico is to have a real, live, wide awake brass band. The organization of the band will be effected Tuesday evening in K. of P. hall. The band will comprise at least forty pieces. As there are a large number of professional musicians in Tropico the success of this band from a musical standpoint will be assured. It has been decided to hold regular weekly rehearsals Saturday evenings.

Miss Mattie Bordwell left this morning for San Francisco, where she will spend a fortnight visiting the exposition and other interesting points in the Bay city. Miss Bordwell will make the trip by boat.

The regular monthly meeting of the Kensington club will be held in G. A. R. hall Wednesday, Oct. 13, and will be an all day event. Luncheon will be served at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Roberts have taken a bungalow on La Brae court for the winter.

Miss Florence Devine of South San Fernando boulevard has returned from a most delightful two weeks' sojourn in San Francisco, where the Panama Pacific exposition and other interesting points were visited.

Eugene H. Imler, upper classman at Throop college, returned Saturday to his home, Palm Villa, to spend Sunday with his mother, Mrs. D. H. Imler. Gene was accompanied by his roommate, Sam Rasmussan, who also enjoyed a brief visit at Palm Villa as the guest of Gene and his mother.

Rev. J. H. Henry leaves shortly for a trip to Pennsylvania extending over a period of several weeks. Upon his return to Tropico Rev. Henry will reside at his former home on North Central avenue, which he vacated while residing in Truckee the past two years.

Mrs. Myra C. K. Shuey is spending several days in Burbank with Mrs. Ralph Robinson, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Watson, left for San Francisco Saturday in their auto, where they will remain a fortnight.

E. L. Williamson of Tropico is enjoying the ownership and use of one of the easy riding Dodge Bros. touring cars recently purchased from the G. A.Montgomery & Co.'s Glendale Agency.

The unspeakable pity is that such magnificent men should be given up to the slaughter of a war that might have been averted.

LEARNING SPANISH

If American business men are neglecting their Latin-American opportunities, the boys and girls of the country are not. From every section come reports of keen interest in the language, history, geography and economics of Spanish countries.

The interest is especially high along the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards, where shipping connection with Central and South America makes Latin-American relation seem more actual and practical.

In language study in the high schools and colleges there is great falling off in the German classes and a surprising demand for Spanish instruction. The Spanish classes in the New York high schools are overflowing, and the same is true in all the Pacific seaports. In Seattle there are seven high school teachers giving all their time to teaching Spanish. In the University of Washington 400 students have registered for the Spanish courses and 200 more had to be turned away.

It seems a pity to neglect the German language because of its incomparably greater and richer literature; but the zeal for Spanish on the part of the country's intelligent young men and women is an admirable tendency deserving every encouragement. It is an omen not merely of more extensive and profitable business relations with our Spanish neighbors, but a new fusion of pan-American culture and ideals and extension of a new, larger Americanism throughout the whole Western Hemisphere.—Long Beach Telegram.

CINNABAR DEPOSITS

Two stray steers caused the discovery of a deposit of cinnabar in the Pilot mountains, western Nevada. On the day of the discovery Thomas Pepper and Charles Keough had been tracking the two steers, when, near nightfall, the trail led over an old prospect in which a face of limestone traversed by small veinlets of red mineral was exposed. The red mineral was recognized by Keough as cinnabar. After finding the steers and taking them to Mina the two discoverers returned to Cinnabar mountain, as the hill on which they had made the find has since been named, where they spent 10 days in careful search and located 17 claims. They later went back to Mina and made known their find, causing intense excitement, and that afternoon almost every citizen of the town left for the site of the discovery by automobile and by other less expeditious conveyances. A large number of claims were staked by the first comers and many more were afterward staked by claimants from Tonopah.

The discovery was widely heralded as the rediscovery of the "lost Hawthorne quicksilver mine," named for Judge Hawthorne, in whose honor, it is said, Hawthorne, the seat of Mineral county, was named. According to local report in the seventies Judge Hawthorne discovered a rich quicksilver deposit, which is believed to have been situated at the site of the recent discoveries. In returning from the mountains, so it is said, Hawthorne lost his bearings, and although to the end of his life he attempted annually to find the "quicksilver mine" he remained unsuccessful. This tradition seems highly improbable. The original discoverer—who he was is unknown—had done some very substantial exploratory work on the prospect. In his efforts to prove his find he had blasted out a considerable mass of solid limestone, and as further tokens of his activity sticks of powder fuse and picks lay abandoned at the prospect. That this energetic prospector lost his way and was unable to find the prospect at which he had labored is not easily credible. It is more likely that he abandoned the prospects as, in his judgment, not sufficiently valuable. The newcomers have found considerably richer deposits than the unknown pioneer did, and have shown that the cinnabar extends along a considerable belt.

The quicksilver deposits on the claims of Pepper and Keough as well as those in the rest of the district are described in Bulletin 620-D, "Some Cinnabar Deposits in Western Nevada," by Adolph Knopf, recently issued by the United States Geological Survey. A copy may be had free on application to the Director of the Survey, Washington, D. C.

A SAD CASE

The worried countenance of the bridegroom disturbed the best man. Tiptoeing up the aisle, he whispered: "What's the matter, Jock? Hae ye lost the ring?"

"No," blurted out the unhappy Jock, "the ring's safe eno'. But mon, I've lost ma enthusiasm."—Youth's Companion.

AN INTERESTING CHARACTER

"There goes Professor Dobbins, the famous ethnologist."

"An interesting character, no doubt."

"Yes, indeed. Why he knows more about the races than any other man in the country."

"F ancy that. And he doesn't look as if he had ever been on a track in all his life."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

THEY BOB UP OCCASIONALLY

"I struck a fellow today who aroused my interest."

"As to how?"

"Amid all these quarrels, his sympathies appeared to be with the United States."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Many men are unwilling to work in the garden because it would spoil their good clothes, and they can't wear overalls as it might hurt their social standing.
